CHAPTER IV LONG-WINGED SWIMMERS Gulls and Terns belong to one family; about forty species of the one hundred known are found in North America. Gulls are maritime and pelagic, though some are found inland. Gulls are larger and stronger than terns, though less graceful and active on the wing. The bills point forward and not downward in flight. They get food largely by skimming it from the surface of the water, or take it from the land, and do not plunge for it, as do the terns. They are largely scavengers, though some feed on small mammals and eggs and the young of other birds. Better swimmers than the terns, they spend more time resting on the water; they nest in colonies, usually on ground, sometimes on rocky ledges, and rarely in trees. Terns visit the shores of salt and fresh water, especially salt. They are often called sea swallows because of their strong, graceful flight. They plunge after fish; in flight the bills point downward. The order Tube-nosed Swimmers contain the greatest fliers. Petrels are closely allied to albatrosses, shearwaters, and fulmars. Petrels are pelagic, visiting land only to nest. They are strong, graceful fliers, and are noted for following ships. Cormorants and Pelicans belong to the order of Totopalmate Swimmers, as all four toes are united by web. The cormorants are found in all parts of the world, ten of the thirty species being found in North America. The doublecrested cormorant is the...
