Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Braille Review, Vol. 12 They may also be divided into groups; viz., those which can be read and not written, and those which can be read and written. All types except those which are purely point types belong to the former group, while all the point types may be grouped in the latter division. The types which we have mentioned, and others of less importance which we might have named, have fallen into disuse except the point systems (British Braille, American Braille, and New York Point), and Moon s System. The last-named is largely used by the old and hard-fingered, and especially by those who lose their sight late in life. It bears a traceable resemblance to the Roman letters used by the seeing. As the Moon type cannot easily be written, but only embossed by machinery, it was not taken into account by the Uniform Type Committee. Their investigations were, therefore, devoted to the three point systems, viz.: British Braille, American Braille and New York Point. The Braille system was introduced into this country and popularised by the late Dr. T. R. Armitage, and the books published by The British and Foreign Blind Association (of which Dr. Armitage was the founder) are embossed exclusively in British Braille. In the late sixties the New York Point System was perfected in the New York City Institution for the Blind. This system consists of dots only two deep, but having a variable base. About ten years later Mr. J. W. Smith, of America, revised the old Braille Alphabet upon the principle of frequency of recurrence. A certain number only of the letters of the British alphabet were...
