It is interesting to note that at Wells we have preserved the names of some of the masons, unearthed through the untiring researches of Canon Church. They are (1) Adam Lock, and his son (2) Thomas Lock, 1224-34. and (3) Master Noreys, 1235-49. In other cases where they are not named, the masons are termed operarius and imaginator, perhaps a sort of designer, or probably the one who made the models for the carver, in fact, the real sculptor. In differing from the theory of Professor Lethaby, I do not wish in the least to detract from the value of the paper written by Bro. Crowe, but to offer him in the name of the Lodge our very hearty thanks for his remarks, and for placing before us a subject it will be well to follow up in our...
