Not illustrated. 1905 Excerpt: .and economist; was born at Langport, England, on February 3, 1826, was graduated from University College, London, and was called to the bar but did not practice. He became a banker and ship-owner, and founded in 1860 and edited until his death The Economist, an important weekly journal of business and finance. He wrote a series of letters in 1851-52, defending Louis Napoleon's coup d'etat, and was the author of several very important works, including The English Constitution (1867); Physics and Politics (1863), and Lombard Street, the last-named a treatise on the money-market. He was also a prolific writer in his own paper, The Economist, and in various reviews. He was an original thinker, and ranked among the foremost political economists of his time, especially leading the school of economists who are not bound by hard and fast tradition. He died on March...
