In November 2006, as you mentioned, the CSB completed a thorough study on combustible dust. The board called for a comprehensive OSHA regulatory standard to prevent dust ex-plosions in general industry, improved training of OSHA inspectors to recognize dust hazards, and improvements to material safety data sheets to better communicate dust hazards to workers. The CSB based its recommendations in part on the success of OSHAs 1987 grain dust standard, which has cut deaths and inju-ries from grain dust explosions and fires by 60 percent. This stand-ard requires worker training, rigorous housekeeping, and limits 1 grain dust accumulations to of an inch. 8 The NFPA has produced highly respected consensus standards about how best to prevent and mitigate combustible dust explo-sions. OSHA has recognized the importance of NFPA standards, and it references them numerous times in the National Emphasis Program for dust, a program which the CSB supports. However, without a comprehensive standard for combustible dust, it is difficult...
